Army Reunion at Murfreesboro.

MRS. L. D. WHITSON, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., is in Lexington laboring in the interest of the reunion of the Army of Tennessee to take place in her city Dec. 27, 28 and 29, in commemoration of the battle of Stone River. January 2nd '63 is also inclusive in that famous battle, but it was unattended with the brilliant successes of the preceding days' battles. It was on that occasion that Breckenridge's division after being thrown down to 4,000 effective men in the previous days' battles, made the memorable charge known in history as "the charge into the jaws of Death," and after routing a division of the enemy, was in turn routed by a park of 62 pieces of Federal artillery concentrating a murderous fire, retiring in great disorder at the end of one hour and ten minutes with a loss of 1,700 men.

It was a sad and peculiar pleasure with which the News revisited the scene of that deadly charge four years ago, and tramped over that same ground made sacred by the blood of many chivalrous Kentucky comrades. The old and desolate weed field over which the brigade charged at "common time," "quick," and "double-quick" just before mixing up with the enemy in the skirt of woods at the edge of the inclined plane had been redeemed from its barren waste and was as white as a weed field covered with snow from the bursted bowls of matured cotton. The clean woods pasture, on the other hand, was neglected and turned over to its primitive desolation, and had grown up in briars, vines and underbrush to that thickness of impenetrability that a man could not walk where once stood the dress-parade line of battle of the boys in blue.

The old ford below alone bore the natural look of '63, and the old picket fence on the river's bank had been replaced by a new one about thirty paces in rear of where it then stood. The line of rifle pits and battery earth-works of the Federals overlooking the ford stood intact, and the sturdy forest oaks in the woods still showed the fast-decaying marks of the storm of shot and shell that filled the air with branches and tree-tops on that memorable day when it seemed impossible for an iron wall to have withstood the murderous storm. Retracting our steps to our rifle pits a mile in the rear of the scene of the charge, we found the earth-works from which we had advanced, in a fine state of preservation, but covered with briars and thorn bushes. A small log cabin had been erected in the little plateau below, and cannon balls of solid shot and shell were lying here and there in the hard-tramped yard as if they supplied the necessities of a primitive croquet ground. The cedar thicket across the river where the Federal army had been driven on massed on the 27th and 28th, had all been cut down and burned by the re-occupation of the Federals after Bragg's retreat, and the miles of the bloody field on the South side of the river had been reclaimed by the cotton planters.

ADVICE TO THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

The following rare document was read before the Court of Claims yesterday, and was ordered spread on their minutes:

To the Board of Magistrates of the County of Bourbon: One of the recognized rights of the people is that of petition and remonstrance when agreed by the action of those in authority, and whereas the county of Bourbon, through its Magistrate's Court, has submitted a most humiliated and disgraceful proposition to the medical profession of Paris, requiring them to let out their professional services at the lowest bidder on the paper practice and assigning as a reason therefor that money might be saved to the county by such action. And as it is a bad rule that won't work both ways, it is hereby respectfully petitioned that the County Judge, County Attorney and County Clerk resign their respective offices, as it is believed they can be filled by competent men at one-half of the present pay by adopting the plan applied to the medical profession.

The county of Bourbon, with a view to save money.

Throught the Magistrate's Court, and his Honor Judge Turney.

Concocted a plan, a trick if you please, To swindle the doctors out of their fees.

The needy and poor they said should have physic To them of fever, the cholic and phthisic; But the bills as presented and charged heretofore, Should be cut down one-half or possibly more.

What right have these doctors, these vultures of prey To come into Court and ask any pay, When it is plain to be seen by all men of brains, What's lost to the doctors, the County Court gains?

Why, the Judge and Attorney and Clerk must be paid, For all of their efforts so strenuously made, To keep a full coffee, a mangled supply, To pay for their beer and drinks of old rye.

What right said the Court, have the poor and the sick, To have of the doctors their choice and their pick? We've appointed a staff to keep them all well, And if they don't like that they can all go to—hear Barnes.

Now the doctors will bid and war with each other To compass the practice of "the man and the brother"

And he who bids least and promises most Judge Turney will swear by with all of his host.

Respectfully, D. KELLER.

ANTONIO COSTA, the cook from Delmonte's, New York restaurant, who opened a lunch stand in the front part of Batterson & James' saloon, skipped Monday night, and left the proprietors of the saloon holding a $30 sack, and various other creditors small amounts. Experience is a dear thing, but Batterson says that James will have it at some price, while James says that Batterson just escaped renting his friend a special room in the rear. Both, however, grin very dryly and deny the corn. The unkindest stroke of all, was, that Mr. Costa paid two dollars of B. & J.'s money to Arch Stout for a quart of whiskey, and remarked that he drank none but the best.

CHARLEY FORD, the assassin of Jesse James, was fired on seven times Tuesday night while he was walking in the graveyard at home, and one bullet passed through his hat. His brother Bob is mysteriously absent and the detectives think that he has been foully dealt with.

—The English Quakers have reopened the prohibition of marriage of first cousins, which has been in force in that body for nearly two centuries. Some able scientists still hold to the belief that such marriages are fruitful of idiosyncy and degeneracy.

—A Kansas miller drowned himself in his mill-pond because a dam he had just built failed to collect water enough to turn the wheel. He exhibited good sense. Some men would have gone home and jawed their wives and kicked the dog clear across the room.

Neglected Graves.

[To the Editor of the Courier-Journal.]

GRAYSVILLE, GA., Nov. 11.—Gents, there are some Confederate soldiers' graves that are in great need of attention, near Reedy's bridge, on the Chickamauga battle-field, they were members of Helm's Kentucky brigade. All the Confederate soldiers have been removed but them, and there was some gentleman from Kentucky here soon after the war and put up head and foot boards to all these graves, but they have long ago rotted away, and nothing to mark the graves but a board nailed to a tree, with the words: "Helm's Brigade Graveyard." I write this thinking the friends of the dead soldiers would have them attended to. Respectfully,

W. H. HILL.

Sergeant Charlie Herbst, of Company H, 2d Ky., formerly of Covington, but now City Librarian for Macon, Ga., is the Kentuckian referred to as having put up the boards at the head of the graves a year or two after the war, as well as having paid many other tributes to the Kentucky Confederate dead on many other battle fields.

The Frankfort correspondent of the Courier-Journal of Wednesday, says, that upon the appearance of the above card in the paper Tuesday, Willis Ringo and other members of the "Orphan Brigade" at that place are taking steps toward soliciting aid from all members of the brigade in the State, for the purpose of removing the remains of their dead comrades at Chickamauga to some suitable place for burial.

Bourbon County Court of Claims.

The Court of Claims yesterday awarded the Drs. Fithian the paupers practice of the Paris precinct, at $400; Dr. Hurst, the Millersburg, at $200; Dr. Keller, Ruddell's Mills, at $100; Dr. Grimes, Flat Rock, at $100; Dr. Brown, North Middletown, $100; Dr. Smith, keeper of poor house, at $100; Joe McCarty, $200 for keeping Court-house, fuel, attending clock, &c. The salary of the County Judge was increased $200, and that of County Attorney Brent's, $100. The usual allowances were made to the county officers, and other minor claims allowed. In the election of the physician at Flat Rock, Col. Louderback, of the Black Maria, very enthusiastically seconded a motion, but was cooled off by the Judge astounding him with the sad intelligence that he was not a Magistrate.

THERE ought to be a law established assessing a dog collar license at a cost of $2.50 each per year—a renewal tag being placed on each year at the same cost. This would thin out the worthless mongrel breed which preys at the hands of the county clerks, for the payment of all losses on sheep when properly proven. At the end of each year the balance left in the fund should be added to the school fund.

LAN FRETWELL has rented his farm of 280 acres to W. L. Davis, brother-in-law of Jno. T. Hinton, for three years, at $1,500 per annum. He will sell his crop, stock, &c. at public sale, on the 23rd. See his advertisement in this issue.

Funeral of the Magees.

[Sedalia (Mo.) Bazaar.]

THE last and act in the Magee tragedy occurred to-day. The funeral attracted persons from a radius of ten miles, and the ground in the neighborhood of the house was covered with vehicles of every description. The bodies of Mrs. Magee and daughter were placed in caskets in the front parlor and the coffin containing the murderer and suicide was in the room where he died. The appearance of the three caskets indicated that there was something uncommon in the affair. Those containing the bodies of the two ladies were thickly covered with wreaths of beautiful flowers. Magee's coffin lay in the upper room alone and undisturbed. No one appeared to think of the miserable murderer, and the room was deserted and empty. On Mrs. Magee's coffin was a silver plate bearing the word "Mother," and on Magee's the word "Father," while on the daughter's was a plate, bearing the single sentence "At Rest."

Rev. E. A. Higginson, of Independence, addressed a few words of consolation to the bereaved sons, taking for his text the words, "Ye believe in God, believe also in Me." He said he felt sure the present sad occurrence would prove a blessing to those who remained, although at present everything seemed very dark. They had however, the cheering consolation of knowing that both Mrs. and Miss Magee had gone to that blessed bourne for which their whole life had been one long preparation.

No reference was made to the murderer, and at the end of his brief address the remains were placed in the hearse, and the cortege proceeded to Union cemetery.

The four sons, Thomas, Cliff, Henry and Augustus, were deeply affected during the remarks of the minister, and seemed completely heartbroken at the sad tragedy. Templeton McGee failed to appear at the house, being away in Belton, Mo.
